SOME THOUGHTS ABOUT PERSONAL PRAYER RETREATS by Wade Allen

What a wonderful week I had this past week as I spent several days up in the hills alone with my thoughts and my LORD. I have had people ask me in the past, “What are you hoping to get out of this kind of personal retreat?” I’ve often struggled to answer that question. Here are some of my thoughts...

The opportunity to REST is a big part of a personal, prayer retreat. A pastor friend of mine in Australia once told me: “Sometimes, the best thing you can do is to get ‘flat-out’ for the Lord!” This is what he called it when he was taking a nap in his office. While on retreat, I slept when I got tired, and got up when I was rested.

The opportunity to REFLECT is also a big part of a personal, prayer retreat. I spent the greater part of the week thinking about my daily walk with the Lord—what kind of rhythm exists in my life right now (spiritually, physically, vocationally, etc.)? What changes do I need to make to make it better?

The opportunity to RESPOND to the Lord is another part of personal, prayer retreats. Getting away enables us to quiet the chaos of life to hear Him when He speaks to our hearts. Someone once wrote, “This retreat is not for me, but for [God]. It is to give him, at least for this little while, the fullest attention and love I can, freed as I am from many other cares and concerns that ordinarily clutter my life... Lord, help me to let go and REST quietly at your feet in complete attention to you. And then my life will be REFRESHED and RENEWED.” (M. Basil Pennington)
